If your results differ from your predictions, don't worry. We will carefully consider every individual and sometimes, even when course entry requirements are not met, students may be accepted onto their chosen course. For these students, the course is studied on a trial basis to the end of September, at which point feedback is provided by teachers, including completion of summer assignments, homework, class-work, attendance and attitudes. This often means that students continue on the course after the end of September.
